The first round of the French Presidential Election takes place on April 10th amid a series of events that have impacted Europe at large. This timely discussion will inform the general audience of the first-round election results and the impacts of the Ukraine crisis on the election while taking into consideration French politics more broadly. Presenters are students of the upper-division course French for Politics, and they have spent the semester learning about French politics. We will talk about immigration, inequalities, European construction and so on. This session will be held in English, and all are welcome! Bring all your questions!
